WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA AND CENTRAL COASTAL AREAS:

Eureka Weather:

Cloudy skies can be expected today with some light rain primarily north of Mendocino County. A cold front will slide through Northwest California tonight into early Sunday bringing a band of moderate rainfall. Dry conditions will begin to develop Sunday afternoon and are anticipated to continue into next weekend.

Medford Weather:

Rain is developing tonight from the southwest. So far measurable amounts have been limited to western Siskiyou County. The overall weather picture looks stormy into Monday then drying out Monday into Tuesday as the ridging sets up offshore. The upper level pattern support dry weather for the rest of the week, but a front will arrive onshore next Thursday night.

Reno Weather:

Moist onshore flow will continue with the best chance of showers north of Interstate 80 through the weekend. Mild temperatures along with breezy conditions can be expected Saturday and Sunday. Dry conditions will return for the start of next week as high pressure develops over the Eastern Pacific.

San Francisco Weather:

A slight chance of rain will continue in the North Bay today and Sunday. Otherwise dry and mild weather will continue for points south of the Golden Gate. High pressure will rebuild by Monday and result in dry weather through next week.

WEATHER

CENTRAL CALIFORNIA AND SOUTHERN SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY

Sacramento Weather:

A couple weak weather systems brush by Northern California into Sunday bringing some clouds and a threat of precipitation mainly north of the Interstate 80 corridor. Dry weather and morning fog expected Monday through Thursday as a ridge of high pressure builds along the West Coast.

Hanford Weather:

High pressure will remain for the next several days. The pattern will remain dry with mainly clear skies except for night and morning fog in the San Joaquin Valley.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA:

Los Angeles Weather:

Above normal temperatures will continue through this weekend as high pressure and offshore breezes persist. The high temperatures will lower a few degrees Sunday through Tuesday as weak onshore flow begins. Temperatures will rebound and offshore winds will develop by mid-week through late week the as high pressure returns.

Extreme Southwestern California Including Orange, San Diego, Western Riverside and Southwestern San Bernardino Counties:

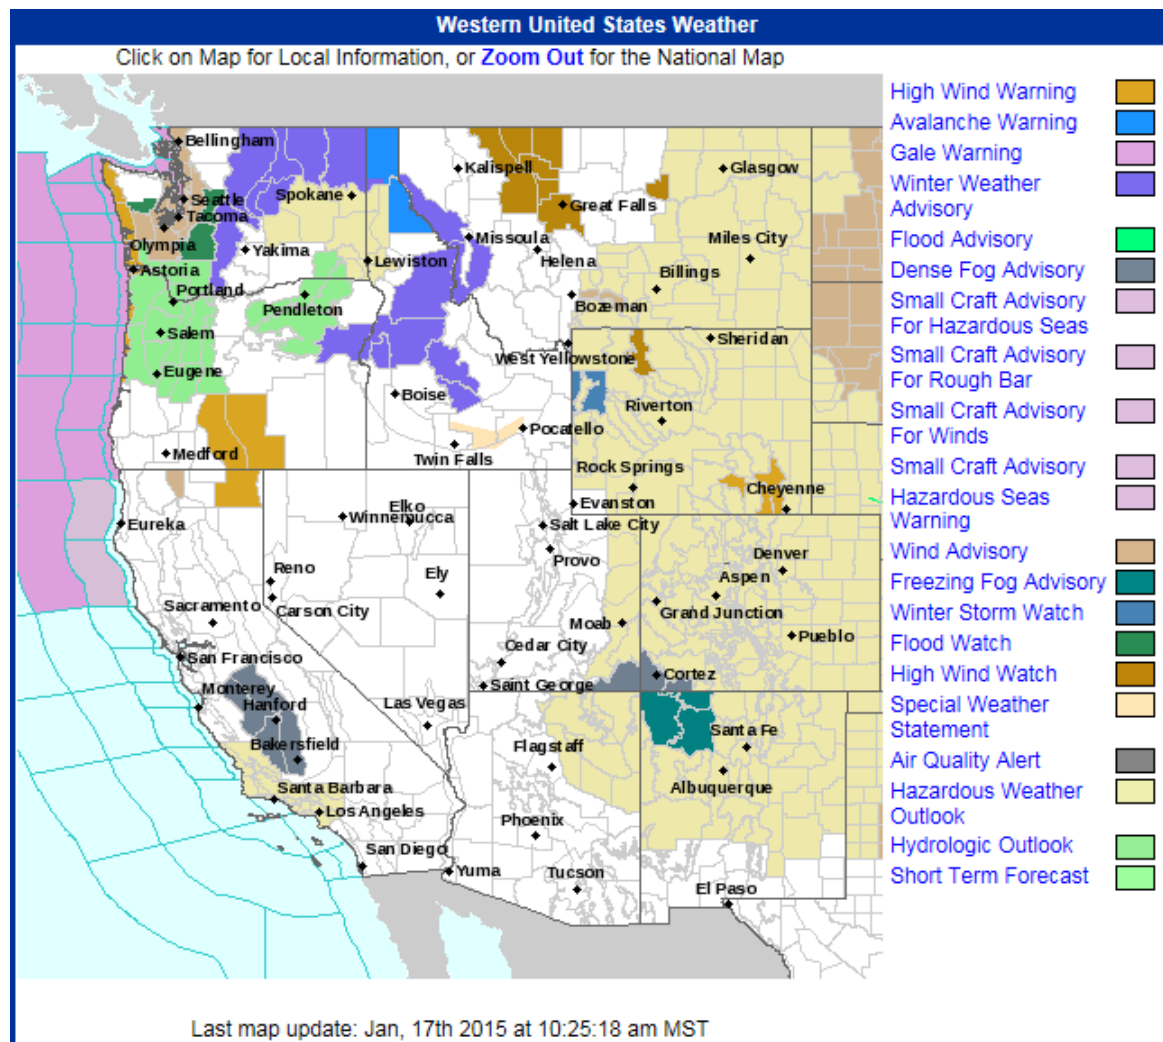

High pressure aloft will result in dry conditions into next week. A shallow marine layer could bring mainly patchy dense fog near the coast Sunday morning and possibly late Sunday night into Monday morning. A trough of low pressure over the western United States will bring a cooling trend Tuesday and Wednesday next week followed by locally gusty northeast winds and warmer days.

Southeast California Weather:

High pressure over the desert southwest is expected to keep the temperatures above normal and skies mostly clear through the early part of next week. Low pressure that is forecast to drop southward during the middle part of next week will then bring somewhat cooler temperatures and increasing clouds before warmer weather returns for the end of next week.
